

Players

GAMEBOOK

in

College

Playing dirty isn't playing fair

History

Campus rape and sexual assaults increased when colleges became opened to women in the 1980's. In 1983 the term "date rape" became popular.

In 1987, 7.7% of men on college campuses admitted to engaging or attempting for sex; less than 5% of their statements resulted in either being expelled or writing a paper of apology to the victim.

In Yale, a fraternity by the name of DKE went near the women's dorms with their member and pledges and began chanting "No means yes and yes means anal!" One member then stated "My name is Jack, I'm a necrophiliac, I f*ck dead women and fill them with my semen." This is one of the many misogynistic rituals in their initiations that the school has condoned.

Brock Turner has recently been the new face of Stanford rapists. Not only was the crime reported and underwent the process of court, but his prison time was only 3 months due to the "fact" that Turner was "a good kid" and "isn't the type of kid to be cut out for prison for such a long sentence".

STATISTICS

Statistics on campus rape and sexual assaults:

- Ages 18-24 are 3x more likely to be raped or assaulted in their first year

- 88% of victims never come forward

- 1 in every 5 women are victims

- 1 in every 16 men are victims

- No athlete is allowed to be confronted during school activities (game season)

- 76% of college rapists admit to using alcohol and or other drugs to weaken victim

- 88% of women never come forward because of lack of trust in authorities

- In 2012 45% of colleges reported 0 sexual assaults

- Harvard has had 135 reported assaults and 10 reported suspensions and no expulsions

- University of virginia has had 0 expulsions or suspensions for assault but at least 83 for cheating.

Issue

When women have an unwanted sexual encounter with a man on campus, the school will try to handle the matters privately. Although, giving privacy for the victim is something obviously correct, not disclosing that there was such a problem on the school grounds is a problem. This is a problem IF the school actually take in the report. If the women go to the police for help, the police do the exact same thing the school does; or if they do take the report, the police antagonize the victim and reassure the suspect that everything is fine. The criminal justice system has a history of being bias against rape/sexual assault victims. The police nor the school take these reports seriously and the lack of transparency is alarming. There is even a rule for colleges that women cannot confront any athletes during school activities (such as game season), and once they are allowed to be confronted, the evidence would not be considered as reliable due to the amount of time already passes since the incident.

P

O

V

Rape is a traumatic experience that leaves every victim with anxiety and PTSD. On the religious standpoint abortion is forbidden no matter the circumstance. Many women are left with very difficult decisions on whether to go with their beliefs or whether to go with their emotions. There is a 5.0% pregnancy rate per rape among victims and 50% of the pregnancies end up in abortion.

"I thought if I can separate myself from every part of him, then I can get control of my life again, but that's not what happened at all. After the abortion, I shut down emotionally."

-Anon

SOLUTIONS

Solutions that can help prevent higher chances of rape on campus would be to allow guests in the later parts of the night or let them stay over in the dorms on certain days with sign in sheets to eliminate the secrecy and know who is responsible if a crime does end up being committed.

Colleges and police should lift the lack of transparency in the statistics of rape on campuses. Women should know what kind of campus they're planning to get into and take precautions once they're enrolled in classes.

On campus rape kits should be available in various locations to promote privacy in the event one should need to use one. Once a rape kit is submitted, police should follow through on ALL reports; maybe even create a rape department altogether like they do with missing persons and homicide.

When any sort of sexual misconduct incident occurs, there should be privacy for all the survivors. The school or police shouldn't release their names in case other people harrass them.

There is really no more logical solution other than to not rape people.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

"Brock Turner Released after 3 Months in Jail." CNN. Cable News Network, n.d. Web. 24 Feb. 2017.

<http://www.kansascity.com/sports/college/big-12/university-of-kansas/article128646254.html>

Driessen, Kort. "Rape Culture Lives in All Facets of Society, Not Just College Campuses." The Badger Herald. N.p., n.d. Web. 24 Feb. 2017.

Lamb, Jason. "Rape Reported Near Popular College Bar." WTVF. N.p., 19 Jan. 2017. Web. 24 Feb. 2017. <http://thehill.com/blogs/pundits-blog/education/312763-in-campus-rape-cases-colleges-to-learn-victim-aggressor-not>

Saul, Stephanie. "When Campus Rapists Are Repeat Offenders." The New York Times. The New York Times, 24 Jan. 2017. Web. 24 Feb. 2017.

HTCorrespondent. "Rape Capital: Delhi Police Head Constable Arrested for Raping First-year College Student." <http://www.hindustantimes.com/>. Hindustan Times, 19 Jan. 2017. Web. 24 Feb. 2017.

"America's Colleges Are Awash With Due Process Violations, Not Sex Crime." The Daily Caller. N.p., n.d. Web. 24 Feb. 2017.

<http://www.slttrib.com/sports/4864516-155/college-basketball-police-investigating-alleged-rape>

Jeffrey Lionel Dahmer

Ted Bundy

Brock Turner

Ed Kemper

Gary Heidnik

Carlton Gary

John Wayne Gacy

ALBERT DESALVO

WRITTEN AND DESIGNED BY ASHLEY
BEJERANO